NYG&B Member-Only Publications

Member Publications—Focused on New York Families

NYG&B Members have exclusive access to two publications focused on New York families—The Record and the New York Researcher. These multiple award-winning publications have been guiding those searching their New York families and providing peer-reviewed scholarly research articles for generations of family researchers.

150 Years of The Record

The New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, published continuously since 1870, is the second-oldest genealogical journal in the United States. Within its pages you will find accounts of New York documented at the level of the individual and find that history is not only shaped by its prominent citizens, but by all of its residents, rich and poor alike. In its thousands of pages are genealogies of New York families and transcripts and abstracts of New York records, the largest collection of reliable New York family history under one title.

Every issue of The Record contains articles that preserve the history of the families and individuals who settled in New York. Those articles can include:

- Solutions to difficult problems, such as identifying a spouse, parents, or another place of residence, with the associated genealogical summary.
- Compiled genealogies of families beginning with an immigrant (in any time period) and covering the initial generations in America.
- Compiled genealogies beginning with a later American generation, especially those that illustrate use of unusual sources.
- Documentation of the origins of New York families in foreign countries or other colonies or states, with the associated genealogical summary.
- Corrections or additions to a prior article in The Record.
- Transcriptions or abstracts of genealogically and/or historically relevant records.

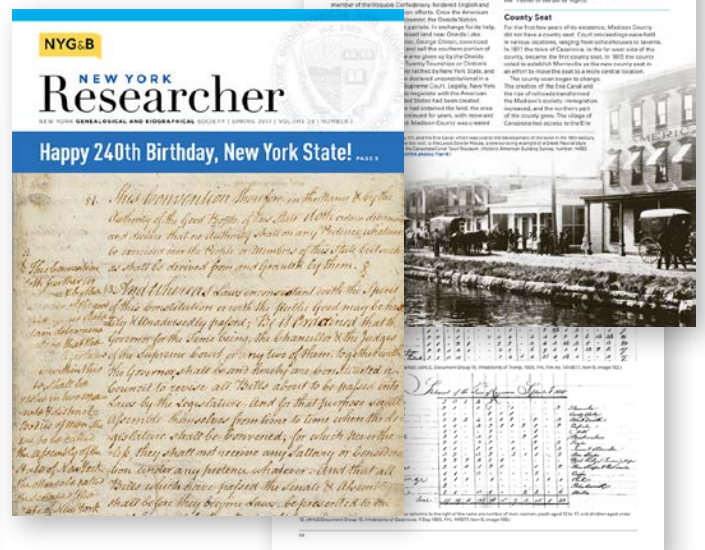

NYG&B Members receive a print copy of the latest issue of The Record every quarter. The most recent issues are available for Members to read online, and the full searchable archive of The Record (including several indexes) is available to search from the NYG&B.

New York Researcher

The New York Researcher is a colorful quarterly that is a benefit of membership in the NYG&B. Covered subjects include informative articles on New York genealogy, news, book reviews, announcements, and NYG&B programs. A searchable, complete run of the New York Researcher and its predecessor publication the NYG&B Newsletter, which was first published in 1990, is available online for NYG&B Members. The feature articles of the New York Researcher have made it a particularly useful research tool for New York genealogists. These articles cover topics such as

- Descriptions of sources for New York genealogy, such as probate, church, and census records.
- Descriptions of holdings of other New York State libraries and record repositories.
- “How to” articles on New York genealogical research, both statewide and for particular counties or cities, religious or ethnic groups, or time periods.
- Lists of accounts of New York families “hidden” in multi-family works, manuscript collections, and periodicals.

New York's Vital Records: The Fundamentals

New York State did not require local governments to report births, marriages, and deaths until 1880. The history of New York State vital record keeping is complex and convoluted, but for the most part, New York state did not force local governments to track birth, marriage, and death events until the 1880s—even after, many smaller municipalities were not stellar in their compliance. Therefore, if you're looking for a birth, marriage, or death record prior to 1880, researchers should check with local records offices first but may need to ultimately seek a vital record substitute.

Where to look for a vital record will change depending on the year and location of the event. New York vital records are not all stored in the same location or by the same authority. Researchers will need to investigate sets of vital records in state capital Albany, New York City, or other local municipalities depending on the time period. There are separate also indexes to many of these different collections.

New York State Vital Records

New York State has created indexes to births, marriages, and deaths occurring after 1880 for locations outside of New York City.

Special Note: state coverage for Albany, Buffalo, and Yonkers does not begin until 1914. If you are seeking a birth, marriage, or death record for an ancestor in one of those locations before 1914, visit the NYG&B's free guide to New York vital records (newyorkfamilyhistory.org/new-york-birth-marriage-death-vital-records) for more information.

Researchers with ancestors anywhere else in New York State can get their ancestor's vital record in two steps:

1. Locate the certificate number in a New York State vital records index
2. Use the certificate number found in the index to request the record

New York State Birth Certificates

Those seeking New York birth certificates should begin with State's index to all birth certificates from 1881. Birth indexes are made available after 75 years, but not all indexes are entirely up to date, and may only go up to the mid-1930s. Another limitation to keep in mind is that not all births were reported in the earlier years—compliance grew over time and before 1913 not all were included.

Fortunately, the New York State Birth Index from 1880–1942 was recently added as a searchable database on Ancestry.com.

Once you have found the birth certificate number, you're ready to request a copy. Learn how at newyorkfamilyhistory.org/new-york-birth-marriage-death-vital-records#NYS.

New York State Marriage Records

Researchers should begin by searching New York State's index to all marriage records from 1881. Marriage indexes are available online at Internet Archive for 1881 to 1964 at <https://archive.org/details/nymarriageindex>. Marriage indexes should be made available after 50 years, but keep in mind that an index in a given repository might not be fully up to date—many go only as late as the early 1960s. As with other vital records, compliance increased as time went on, and records between 1881 and 1913 may be incomplete. Also many counties hold marriage license files, some of which many be found in FamilySearch's New York, County Marriages, 1847–1848; 1908–1936 database (familysearch.org/search/collection/1618491).

Once you have found the certificate number, you're ready to request a copy. Learn how at newyorkfamilyhistory.org/new-york-birth-marriage-death-vital-records#NYS.

New York State Death Certificates

To find a death certificate, researchers should begin by searching New York State's index to deaths beginning in 1880. Death indexes are made available after 50 years.

Fortunately, one can access the New York State Death Index for years between 1880–1956 online. The NYG&B eLibrary contains images of the New York State Death Index, and images can also be found at Internet Archive. Ancestry.com has a searchable database that also contains the same images as the collections above.

For more recent deaths, researchers should use New York State's Interactive Ancestry/Genealogical Research Death Index (<https://health.data.ny.gov/Health/Interactive-Ancestry-Genealogical-Research-Death-I/x83h-k5ey>), which begins with 1957 and contains deaths up to the current legal limit (1969 as of 2020).

How to Request New York State Vital Record Certificates

Once you have retrieved information about the record you are seeking, you can obtain a copy of the vital record certificate by contacting either:

- The New York State Department of Health (health.ny.gov/vital\_records/genealogy.htm)
- The local registrar or municipal clerk.

New York City Vital Records

Finding a New York City birth, marriage, or death record can be complicated due to the different territorial and record keeping histories of each of the five boroughs: The Bronx, Brooklyn (Kings County), Manhattan (New York County), Queens, and Staten Island (Richmond County).

The New York City Municipal Archives (operated by the Department of Records and Information Services, or DORIS) houses the largest collection of birth, marriage, and death records for New York City, but other collections do exist elsewhere.

Early New York City vital records

Where to look and what methods to use can vary depending on the county or borough you are looking in, as well as the exact year. If you're looking for a birth, marriage, or death certificate from the early 1800s or before, a good place to start is Harry Macy's detailed New York Knowledge Base guide to New York City vital records, available on the NYG&B's website (nyfamilyhistory.org).

New York City Municipal Archives: The largest collection of NYC vital records

In general, researchers can find vital records in these time periods at the New York City Municipal Archives:

- Birth records: 1847–1909 (all boroughs)
- Marriage records: 1847–1949 (all boroughs, but beginning earlier for Manhattan)
- Death records: 1847–1948 (all boroughs, but beginning earlier for Manhattan)

A more detailed listing of availability can be found in the Municipal Archives List of Holdings on the DORIS website (www1.nyc.gov/site/records/historical-records/holdings.page).

Note that coverage dates do not necessarily apply to all pre-consolidation municipalities (towns or cities located in Brooklyn, Bronx, Queens & Staten Island that weren't part of New York City until 1898). For greater detail by town and village pre-consolidation see New York City Municipal Archives: An Authorized Guide for Family Historians.

To retrieve a copy of a certificate, the most important piece of information a researcher should have is the certificate number. Certificate numbers can be found by locating the name of the individual in a vital records index.

A number of indexes to New York City's birth, marriage, and death records are available online at Ancestry, FamilySearch, Reclaim the Records, the Italian Genealogy Group, and the German Genealogy Group.

Once the certificate number has been found, there are a number of ways to obtain a birth, marriage, or death certificate. It is easy to order a New York City birth, marriage, or death certificate online (www1.nyc.gov/site/records/historical-records/order.page) or visiting the Municipal Archives in person. For a small fee, the NYG&B's records retrieval service can also obtain the certificate for you.

New York City Department of Health and Mental Hygiene: More Recent Birth and Death Certificates

More recent collections of birth and death certificates in New York City are maintained by the NYC Department of Health and Mental Hygiene (DOHMH). After a certain period of time, these records are transferred from DOHMH to the DORIS and stored at the Municipal Archives, where they can be accessed by any member of the public. Currently, records are transferred to DORIS and made fully public on the following schedule:

- Birth Certificates: 125 years after the event
- Death Certificates: 75 years after the event

Vital certificates that are still at the Department of Health can be accessed, but not by everyone. For more details visit the NYG&B's free guide to New York vital records (newyorkfamilyhistory.org/new-york-birth-marriage-death-vital-records).

The Home of Kinship Books!

KINSHIP
NY Genealogy & History Books

Kinship Books began more than 50 years ago, under the careful stewardship of Arthur C.M. Kelly of Rhinebeck, New York, who began locating, copying, and transcribing religious records, account books, store ledgers, census records, and other important materials from various locations throughout the state of New York. Focusing heavily on the areas surrounding the Hudson River, Kinship's publications have helped thousands of researchers uncover their New York ancestors. Since 2018, Kinship Books has been under the stewardship of the NYG&B.
